Senator Elkins today introduced in the senate the administration bill for an amendment to the interstate commerce law. It was the same as that presented to the house yesterday by Representative Townsend of Michigan.

RECORD-BREAKING
ICE CROP IS NOW
BEING HARVESTEDQuality of Ice Is Excellent but Heavy
"Snow Causes Much Work and Expense."

What promises to be the finest, ice ever harvested in this city is now being put into the houses of the City Ice Company on North Main street. Over 125 men and four teams are at work on the river just north of the railroad bridge, clearing and cutting the ice and packing it in the five big icehouses.

It is expected that between fifteen and eighteen thousand tons of high-grade ice will be stored for the coming summer when the work ceases. At the rate the work is now progressing it is thought that two weeks will see the last cake packed.

The ice now being cut averages over thirteen inches in thickness and is of the best quality. The heavy snows however, have covered it to a considerable depth and the company is put to great expense to clear the surface. Twenty-five men are engaged in this work constantly and the whole force was busy until midnight yesterday.

Bob's Brewery

The Bob Brewing Company also has about thirty-five men at work on the natural spring pond adjacent to the buildings. The large icehouse and refrigerator at the brewery are being filled with one thousand tons of excellent ice, averaging thirteen inches in thickness. It is expected that work will be finished today.

ORGANIZE LUMBER COMPANY IN CITYOrganization Is Capitalized at $400,000 and Controls 4,000 Acres of Land in Oregon.

After negotiations extending over the past two months, another large lumber company, capitalized at $400,000, in which there are over thirty Janesville stockholders, has been formed in this city, known as the Gilkey Lumber Company.

The officers elected are as follows:

President, Dr. Frank Farworth; vice president, John F. Sweeney; secretary and treasurer, George E. King.

Over four thousand acres of Washington fir, located in the east-central portion of Oregon, about three miles from the ocean, are comprised in the holdings of the company.

Although the organization is known as a lumber company, no lumbering work will be carried on, as the corporators have simply purchased the land to hold as an investment. The company is a distinctly local corporation but a branch office, managed by the Pendleton & Gilkey company, has been opened in Everett, Wash.

STATUE OF WALLACE UNVEILED IN HALL OF

Placed in Old Legislative Chamber.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—The marble effigy of General Lew Wallace, contributed to Statuary Hall by the State of Indiana, was unveiled this morning with impressive ceremonies and brilliant oratory. The memory of Indiana's distinguished son, who served his State and Nation as soldier and diplomat and who acquired everlasting fame as the author of "Ben Hur," was honored in a way to be remembered by the large audience that gathered in the senator wing of the capitol building to witness the unveiling.

William Allen Wood, one of the members of the monument committee, delivered the address of presentation. The Rev. George Dudley, of this city, delivered the invocation. Governor Marshall accepted the statue in behalf of the State of Indiana and eloquent addresses extolling the life and deeds of General Wallace were made by Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Hussein Kazimoy, the Turkish ambassador, and W. H. Andrews, the delegate in Congress from New Mexico. The participation of the Turkish ambassador in the exercises was in recognition of the great popularity which General Wallace enjoyed among the people while serving as United States minister at Constantinople.

James Whitcomb Riley read a poem he had written for the occasion, and the exercises concluded with the unveiling of the statue by Lew Wallace, Jr., a grandson of General Wallace.

The statue is the work of Andrew O'Connor, the American sculptor who has resided for some years in Paris. The figure is slightly over-life size, and with the pedestal stands about ten feet high. The base is a square block of Indiana limestone. On the base is the inscription: "Lew Wallace, Soldier, Author, Diplomat."

General Wallace is represented in the uniform of a major general of the period of the civil war. He is bare-headed and his uniform coat is loosely and carelessly fastened. He is erect in posture and on the alert, his eyes glancing into the distance.

TWO SEEK POSITION OF NIGHT WATCHMAN

Case Similar to Brown-Appleby Flight for Minor Place in Janesville, Has Come Up in Beloit.

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 11.—Two men are applying for the place of night watchman on the west side of the river. Floyd Carter, who is deputy sheriff and officer of the municipal court, and Everett Goss, the former fire chief, Goss has the appointment of the mayor, and Carter of the chief of police and fire and police commissioners. As the pay for the watchman is entirely from merchants, either can serve as a watchman without police power, although it is not desirable. The two appointments again raise the question of the authority over the police between the mayor and the chief of police. The question is up to the city attorney.

The prohibitionists are holding a school for police today with several workers in the anti-saloon fight present. Twilight William P. F. Ferguson of Chicago will give an address.

James Smith, who was hurt on the head by a great cask of ice at the tea house the other day and suffered a fractured skull, is doing well and his recovery seems assured.

The Engineering club of the Fahrbrans-Morse company's workmen had an open meeting last night at the plant and had their wives and friends present. There were addresses on engineering propositions affecting the business. Refreshments were served and the great shops were thrown open for inspection. The subject last night was the producer gas engine, which is a great part of the business of the shop.

The North-Western Ry. Co. has abandoned several passenger trains which pass through this city until weather conditions change and the traffic demands get less. There has been a lot of coal received in Beloit the past two days and people are feeling easy over the matter of fuel.

COLD WEATHER DOES NOT TROUBLE ROCK CO. FARMERS

High Market Prices More Than Make Up for Extra Amount of Feed Necessary for Stock.

North Spring Valley, Jan. 10.—The cold zero weather is causing farmers to feed their stock more liberally than usual. However, with pork selling above the eight-dollar mark and beef and mutton correspondingly high, and with butter, cheese and eggs at top-notch prices, they are no real worry with the outlook.

The concert at the Baptist church Friday night by the Apollo Quintette Concert company was very good, but not as high class as the committee expected and was led to believe it would be. JAMES K. VARDMAN.

MAY GO TO SENATE—JAMES K. VARDMAN

Jackson, Miss.—A lively scrap is being indulged in by the legislature in attempting to choose a new senator for the seat in the United States senate left vacant by the death of A. J. McLaren. At the present time Col. James Gordon is representing the state, having received his temporary appointment by Governor Noel.

Among the candidates James K. Vardman, formerly governor, is at present leading and unless in dark horses to put forward as a compromise candidate he will in all probability receive the appointment.

SEVERAL QUESTIONS ASKED IN LETTER

Government Desires Considerable Information From Companies
in the State,

All the incorporated companies in Janesville and other cities throughout the state a few days ago received in their mail blank on which they are to make out answers to certain questions which the United States government wishes to know. These bears upon the proposition of a corporation tax. The blanks are to be filled out by the corporations and returned to the internal revenue bureau.

The blanks are sent out under the law of August 5, imposing a one per cent tax on the annual net income of corporations, joint stock companies, associations and insurance companies. With the blanks are sent pamphlets containing the section of the law authorizing the corporation tax.

The answers demanded are to these questions:

Total amount of bonded or other indebtedness outstanding at the close of the year.

Gross income consisting of the gross revenue derived from the operation and management of business and properties, together with all amounts of income from other sources including dividends on stock of other organizations subject to this special excise tax received as shown by entries upon its books from January 1 to December 31 of the year for which the return is made.

Deductions.

Total amount of all the ordinary and necessary expenses of maintenance and operation of the business and properties of the corporation.

Amount of loss sustained January 1 to December 31. Total amount of depreciation January 1 to December 31.

Total amount of interest January 1 to December 31 on bonded indebtedness to pay an amount not to exceed the amount of paid-in capital at close of year.

Total taxes paid January 1 to December 31 imposed under authority of the United States or any state or territory thereof; foreign taxes paid.

Amount received by way of dividends upon stock of other corporations, joint stock companies, associations and insurance companies subject to tax.

Total deductions.

Net income.

Specific deduction from net income allowed by law is $5,000.

Amount on which tax at 1 per cent is to be calculated.

Thus, if the net income of a corporation is $20,000, the amount on which it must pay this corporation tax is $15,000.

These schedules must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue for the district in which is located the principal office of the corporation making the return on or before March 1.

On the whole Uncle Sam is not as particularly inquisitorial in these blanks as he might be, yet some intelligent corporations intent to disorganize the law stand. Said one druggist: "I don't know why I should have to pay this tax simply because my business is in the form of a stock company while other druggists, who choose to be morally firm, go free. I shall file articles of cancellation with the secretary of state if the law is not repealed. That's a simple way out of it."

There will be eight charts of the work done in the eighth grade, including free-hand cutting, illustrated conception work, raffia work, designing work, and wood-carving. Examples of the work done in the manual training department of the high school have been prepared by Prof. Vil. Beers consisting of drafting and bench work, wood-turning, iron work and steel work. The training in domestic science received in the high school have been prepared by Prof. Laura Cohen, head of the domestic art department. The samples are all of work done during the fall term of school just past. To one will be the handwork done by the Freshmen pupils and the others will contain the machine work done by the Sophomores and Juniors. The inferior samples will show the making of garments and the drafting of patterns. The Seniors will have an exhibit of cooking.

THE SENATORS AVOID A CLASH

ADOPT RESOLUTION THAT HOUSE
SHALL NAME BALLINGER-PINCHOT COMMITTEE.

SUSTAINS CANNON'S DEFEAT

Republican Congressional Committee
Issues Warning That Insurgents Need Expect No Assistance When They Come Up for Re-election.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The senate committee on public lands bucked down and the Ballinger-Pinchot resolution, shorn of the provision restoring power to Speaker Cannon to name the house members on the joint committee of investigation, was put through the senate by unanimous vote and without discussion. Thus was avoided a clash between the two houses of congress which had been expected since Saturday, when the senate committee tacked on the Cannon provision to the Jones-Humphrey resolution.

This sustains the defeat of Cannon in the house. It was said in the house that Representative Dwight of New York, the Republican whip, had taken the name of the insurgent congressman from the list of representatives to whom he regularly sends notices demanding their attendance at times of division.

Interest In Insurgent Warning.

Although the army appropriation bill still engaged the attention of the house when that body convened, the members manifested far greater interest in the Pinchot-Ballinger situation and in a statement issued by the Republican congressional committee openly warning insurgent congressmen that they need expect no help from the administration when they come up for re-election.

Insurgents to Meet and Reply.

Half a dozen leading members of the revolting faction were seen in their offices in the house building before the session of the house and were emphatic in condemning what the congressional committee had said and done. All were in favor of a meeting of the insurgents without further delay and of a reply to the committee's letter. An unequivocal answer was necessary, they declared.

Plain Letter Sent to Taft.

Gardner of Massachusetts, one of the leading insurgents, has written to President Taft a letter, the text of which has not been disclosed, but which is said to treat with the situation in plain language.

All the insurgents wished it understood that in the Ballinger-Pinchot issue they desired to see appointed by the house an impartial committee, which would undertake no "whitewash." They did not care to see any of their number on the committee, but insisted that it be a body of "fair intentions."

Cannon Will Not Quit.

Speaker Cannon has flatly declined to retire from politics at the end of his present term. Not only will he be a candidate for re-election to the Sixty-second congress, but, if re-elected, he will insist upon being his party's candidate for speaker.

In vigorous words he handed this message out to his friends. The declaration puts an end to the stories that the speaker was winding up his political career with this session of congress. More than that, it is noted to all of the beginning or war on insurgency, the plain intent of which is to stomp it out, root and branch.

Will Probe Into High Prices.

President Taft gave his approval to the proposed investigation by a select committee of the senate concerning the increased cost of living. He did not commit himself to any special plan for inquiry, but declared that something should be done to ascertain why the prices of food products have steadily increased and determine whether action can be taken by congress to remedy existing conditions.

WOMAN HEADS TAX LIST WITH $6,000,000

Washington, Jan. 11.—Judge R. S. Lovett, president of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, submitted a proposition to President Taft and Attorney General Wickham for a settlement out of court of the government's trust-busting suit against the gigantic Harriman system. The conference at the White House executive office lasted nearly four hours and at its conclusion Attorney General Wickham announced that no definite result had been arrived at.

"The question of reaching an agreement for the settlement of the government's suit against the Harriman system, brought under the anti-trust act, has been presented," he explained, "but other conferences must be held before it can be decided whether the litigation will be ended or pressed to a final hearing. That is all that can be said at this time."

Frank B. Kellogg, who conducted the successful prosecution against the Standard Oil Company, was a party to the conference. Judge Lovett and his assistant counsel, ex-Senator John C. Spooner, and Maxwell Dewart declined to discuss the matter in any phase.

It is understood that the attorney general looks with favor upon any proposition which will give the government what it has been demanding in its suit begun at Salt Lake City in the summer of 1908.

Just what motive is behind this unexpected move for a settlement is not known. The government officials hold that they have a good case.

Judge Signs Petition for Pardon on Young Embroiders.

St. Louis, Jan. 11.—His voice shaking with emotion and with tears in his eyes, United States District Judge David P. ("Pat") Dyer, terror to hardened criminals who have to face him, sentenced William A. Gray and George F. Smith, Jr., both boys and former bank clerks, to five years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Appeals for pardons for them have been made to the department of justice at Washington, and to President Taft. Judge Dyer and former United States District Attorney Henry W. Blodgett have both signed these petitions, and it is believed the boys will be pardoned.

Corbett, the pugilist, and lately similarly employed by the Leavitt family.

Smallen, who is four years his wife's junior, also lives at Bayside, where he is known as "the Candy Kid" on account of his good looks. His mother keeps a laundry. The two were married in Jersey City, it is understood.

La Crosse Trades Council Starts Plan

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 11.—The La Crosse Trades and Labor Council, the central body of the La Crosse labor unions, purchased a carload of flour and its officers announced that the council will buy other food necessities in big lots to be resold on the co-operative plan at wholesale cost to union members, because, it is alleged, with the cost of living where it is, it is impossible for the average laborer to exist properly. The council is also considering the establishment of a co-operative bakery, operated by the unions, where bread would be sold to laboring men at the bare cost of its manufacture.

WILL PREVENT FUEL FAMINE

Railroads Can No Longer Follow Old
Practice of Marking All Available
Cars "Company's" and Distributing Among Favorites.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The United States supreme court reversed what is known as the Illinois Central and the Alton coal cases and the independent coal operators of the country and especially of the Illinois field won a sweeping victory.

The decision will go far toward preventing coal famines because of car shortages in the future, because the court held, in effect, that railroads can not follow the old practice of marking practically all available cars at such times as "company fuel cars," and distributing them among favored mines.

APPEALS FROM GROSSEUP'S DECISION.

The case decided was an appeal by the Inter-State Commerce Commission from an injunction granted by Judge Grosscup against the Illinois Central and the Alton and Kohlman more than a year ago. Upon the complaint of the Illinois Coaliers Company, an independent mining concern, the commission had issued an order that in times of car shortage what are known as private cars, foreign cars and company fuel cars must be counted when the railroads distribute cars pro rata according to the average output of the various mines in the times of car shortages.

Previous to that order of the commission it had been the custom of the various railroad companies to take such cars into account but mining concerns favored by these railroads were given all the foreign cars available, such private cars as the different mines controlled and cars for the loading of any particular railroad's fuel first, and then pro-rated what cars remained among all the mines, whether favored or not.

Under the order the companies were allowed two years from July 1, 1908, to make regulations putting it in effect but the companies, or rather the Illinois Central and the Alton roads, which are the great coal lines of the state chose to go into effect to light the order. Judge Grosscup and his associates sustained it as to everything except the fuel cars for the railroads themselves and the commission appealed.

The supreme court was to rule on New Year's Day.

The supreme court, in an opinion written by Justice White, held that although the railroads did buy their coal at the mine tipple, still it was to be reckoned as commerce in times of car shortages, and that the commission did have authority to regulate that commerce, contrary to the finding of the lower court.

CAR HITS AUTO; KILLS THREE.

Atlanta Motor Party Crashes Into Street Car, Three Dying.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 11.—Frank and Harold George, brothers, and W. R. Garner, three most prominent young men in Atlanta, were instantly killed when a touring automobile in which they were speedling out Peach Tree road, was torn to pieces by a trolley car.

W. H. George, father of the George brothers, and F. S. Gibb, who were also in the automobile, were seriously injured and may not recover.

Henry Johnston, motorman, of the trolley car, was badly injured.

W. H. George, who was testing the automobile, was at the steering wheel and driving the automobile rapidly.

Suddenly he saw another automobile dash around a curve.

To avoid collision with it, he turned his machine across the street car tracks just in time for it to hit by a fast moving trolley car.

WOMAN HEADS TAX LIST WITH $6,000,000

Mrs. John S. Kennedy's Personal Assessment Exceeds That of Andrew Carnegie.

New York, Jan. 11.—According to the list of personal tax assessments made public women of New York are assessed, as a rule, for larger sums than the men.

Mrs. Emma B. Kennedy, widow of

John Stewart Kennedy, has a personal property valuation of $6,000,000 after her name on the tax books. This is $1,000,000 more than the valuation of the personality holdings of Andrew

Carnegie, which are placed at $5, 000,000.

Mr. Carnegie's holdings are the largest, according to the tax books, of any of the wealthy men.

Mrs. Russell Sage has declared she were $5,000,000 worth of personal property. Mrs. Besse Mc. Leggott places her personal property valuation at $1,000,000.

In glaring contrast to the personal holdings of the women, are the personal property valuations given by the wealthy men of New York as follows:

John D. Rockefeller, $2,500,000; J.

Hopkins Morgan, $200,000; Charles M.

Schwab, $250,000; John Jacob Astor,

WHAT MAY HAPPEN

Affairs in the House of Representatives at Washington are now so badly muddled up that grave fears are expressed as to the final outcome. The little band of insurgents, representing half a dozen western states, is claiming a victory over the administration party through an alliance with the democratic members.

They hope to be endorsed by the home constituency, and have some reason to believe that this endorsement will be forthcoming, as the state of Iowa is already organizing and other disgruntled states are proposing to follow suit.

What will be the result of sober second thought is for the future to determine, but it is well to look the situation squarely in the face and consider what may happen.

This country has never had room for two strong political parties, and during the past half century one or the other of these two great parties has been in control. Government has been at its best when those two parties have been so evenly divided that one acted as a check on the other.

Greenbackism, socialism, prohibition, free silver, and other issues have cropped out from time to time, and while these side issues have temporarily weakened the old organizations, none of them have gained sufficient strength for national recognition.

At the present time the insurgents seem possessed with the insane notion that they can organize a new party and swallow up the old republican party.
Unless they come to their senses, and abandon the plan, there is but one probable result and that is democratic national victory in 1912.

The insurgent movement may capture Iowa and two or three other western states. If it does the electoral college will have a democratic majority, and it is not difficult to understand why the congressional delegation is so willing to be led.

The question of absorbing interest, just now, is the final outcome. Is the nation ready to turn over the administration to the democratic party?
The last four years of Cleveland and a democratic congress is of recent history, but its lessons have been largely forgotten, and experience is the only teacher which will satisfy the new generation.

A repetition of these experiences is as sure to follow as time is to pass, if democracy gains control, whether Bayan or any other man be the leader.
Cleveland was a statesman of exceptional ability, and yet under his administration the party demonstrated its inability to cope with national affairs.

Lack of confidence and free trade tendencies closed up thousands of factories, paralyzed industries, and turned loose an army of tramps. Revenues fell off so that we were compelled to borrow heavily for running expenses, and work everywhere was decreased without regard to wages.

No complaint was made of high prices because all kinds of supplies exceeded demands, and, in many homes there was no money to buy goods at any price. Soup houses were in the rule and not the exception in all large cities, and the empty dinner pail was a sad reality.

The nation today is overrun with thieves of all classes from Collier's and the Chicago Tribune to the agitator with no other occupation, who claims for equal distribution of property and equal privilege. Socialists, all wearing the same collar under a different brand.

Some one has suggested that the time is ripe for an era of hard times, and that nothing else will bring this disgraceful element to their senses, and it may be true. Too much prosperity has unbalanced them.

The nation is headed that way just at present and it remains to be seen whether the people who are leading and encouraging the movement are wise enough to recognize it.

THE CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE

"Reforms do not come of themselves. Abuses are not corrected automatically," says the Pittsburgh Gazette. "Last year twenty-eight states made important amendments to their school and child labor laws. If it were possible to trace all these efforts to their ultimate source, it would probably be found that the initial impulse in most cases came from the National Child Labor committee, which has its headquarters at 101 East Twenty-second street, New York city.

This committee, organized in 1907, has done a noble work in the investigation of child labor conditions, making public the facts in a series of pamphlets of which No. 107 has just been issued. As the work is supported entirely by voluntary memberships, anyone who wishes to make a Christmas gift to childhood in general cannot do better than to add his name to the roll of 4,000 contributing members.

"Despite all that has been done, a vast amount of labor remains to be forced into the industries at an increasing rate under the present pressure of economic forces. While the population of the continental United States increased 50.6 per cent during the years from 1880 to 1900, the total number of children from ten to fifteen years of age engaged in trade and transportation increased 216.5 per cent, and of those engaged in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits 113.1 per cent. In spite of sentiment and legislation, the number is still increasing."

"Compulsory education and factory inspection are but insufficient safeguards. During the past year a boy of nine was found working in a Vermont woolen mill. In the sardine canneries of Maine a good many children of eight or ten years are employed and during the busy season they sometimes work 15 or 16 hours at a stretch."

"It will not do to condemn individuals for this outrage. The greed of parents or employers is not wholly to blame. Conditions have brought about this state of affairs and we must remedy the conditions. Childhood is sacred and must not be despoiled of its golden bloom if manhood is to reap the rich harvest of life. To this end the national child labor committee deserves all encouragement, especially at this season when the Children's Friend became a child."

This is good work and entitled to generous support. The children of the land are helpless and unless protected from the greed and avarice of unscrupulous employers the next generation will show the results of neglect.

The game of politics is being played just now in Washington, to the exclusion of all other business and the insurgents are finding it difficult to establish their right to republican recognition. After voting persistently with the democrats on all proposals, the only consistent course for them to pursue is to join the party as fulfilled members.

President Van Duzen of the state university is reported as saying that the name of Phineas will be at the head of the list 1,000 years hence, when other names are forgotten. That's a fine proposition in defense of disloyalty. Fortunate for the country that college presidents and much-ranking magistrates are in the minority.

The campaign for government by comission has closed, and the verdict will be known shortly after seven o'clock tonight. Some of the men whose names appeared this morning as opposing the plan signed a petition favoring it two months ago. Consistency is a jewel, not always appreciated.

The man, E. C. Hatch, who secured the publication of an article signed "Progressive Citizen," a few days ago is so much of a myth that the postoffice authorities are unable to locate him. Too much of a coward to come out in the open, he is entitled but scant consideration.

Gifford Phineas' name will attract attention a little longer than the Chicago man, Crane, who failed to go to China because of the investigation soon to be taken up in connection with the party he is entitled to but soon forgotten.

The shops of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road turned out 90 complete new freight trains last year, besides other equipment. Five thousand six hundred and sixteen employees were on the payroll, which amounted to $3,361,000 for the year.

If you have not voted the polls will be open until 7 o'clock tonight. If the commission plan is defeated it will be because of indifference on the part of taxpayers who should feel a vital interest in its success. Can you afford to take the chance?

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

TOO LATE.

You may look through the letter printed below as though a window and see a naked soul, remorseful and despairing.

The letter was written by Mrs. Charles D. Rhodes of Denver to her husband in Chicago and was used by Mr. Rhodes as an exhibit in securing a divorce from the woman.

Mrs. Rhodes became fascinated with one Harry Milled, who was already married, and the two ran away together.

It was three months before Mr. Rhodes heard from his wife, and it was through this letter:

Dear Dave—Oh, what shall I do? I am so unhappy! I cry awhile and pray awhile. I want to see you and blister so much. I ran across his little rings in my trunk today, and you know the rest. Oh, Dave, how I love you! If we could only get out the past! Darling, if I could only tell you! Tell me, what shall I do? This parting is not what it cracked up to be, honey. If you had just killed me and spared me the misery! I guess we will end with me to the carbolic acid bottle. Think how happy we would be and pray God to make us happy again.

Never loved her husband?

Yes, she did. That is very plain from the tear-botted human document filed by the husband in the divorce court. But she woke up to the fact too late.

Poor woman!

The husband is like flint toward her, and she has learned she cannot depend on her paramour. If he has not already abandoned her, he will soon do. And probably he will leave her helpless and go back to the bosom of his family. That is the man of it.

It is easy to predict the poor thing's death—either by the carbolic acid route or slowly, slowly sinking into the mire, where she was lured by the false light.

There's a grim warning in that letter to the married woman who hesitates.

Evidence of Prosperity.

"Mr. Brown just got a terribly big salary."

"Why do you think so?"

"They have beef three times through

FASHION'S your hat; your husband

DEVOTEE just adores you, and all the town knows that."

"Of course I know he loves me," she answered, with a smile, "but that will not do any figure—divorcee are in style. Decrees were won in triumph by friends of mine, of late, and every time I meet them I feel so out of date!"

I've just come from a party—the swellest of the town; I felt like some old woman who wears a last year's gown; and all the ladies chattered of husbands in their string, decrees of separation, and all that sort of thing."

"But, madam," said the lawyer, "what reasons can you give? For better, finer husbands than yours, I think don't live."

"What do I want with reasons?" she answered, in a huff; "I want a separation, and that should be enough; I want the rare distinction a court of justice lends; I'm feeling too old-fashioned among my lady friends; I must have some good reason!" I do not think you're nice; his name is William Henry—that surely will suffice?"

TRACK CLEAR AGAIN FOR RACES ON ICE

Janeville Horse Owners Continue Sports Inaugurated Last New Year's Day.

Although the recent bad weather put a stop to ice races, the first of which were held on the Fox House Pond last New Year's Day and brought forth a large crowd in addition to trying out some of the best horses in Janeville, the promoters have not been discouraged but have cleared the course again and held some good races this afternoon. A number of local enthusiasts entered their horses and some exciting dashes intensified the friendly rivalry of the racers. No records were kept of the winners.

GRANT U. FISHER HAD A RELAPSE YESTERDAY

Felt So Much Better That He Decided to Indulge in a Real Meal and a Trip to Madison.

Assemblyman Grant U. Fisher, who has been confined to his home on South Main street with a low type of intermittent fever, resembling typhoid in some of its symptoms, felt so much better yesterday that he decided to partake of real food and make a trip to Madison. He was overtaken by severe chills while on his way to the depot and had to give up the project. Dr. R. W. Edden, who is attending him, stated that the patient was much better today but would have to "be good" if he expected to get well.

Directory of the F. R. A. tomorrow evening at the Spanish War Veterans' hall. Supper will be served from 6:30 to 7:30, followed by installation of officers. Supreme Secretary C. A. Robins will be present to install the officers. All members are requested and all contracts to further such purposes and levy of taxes, therefore, were absolutely void.

The defendants, through their attorneys, thereafter filed a motion for a rehearing, supported by an exhaustive argument therefor. This motion was today denied and the judgment of the court stands wholly reversed.

The Smiths.

As to Smith, a correspondent points out that while there are now about 350,000 members of the great family in England alone, in Old Testament times, according to the first book of Samuel, "there was no Smith throughout the land of Israel." This verse the late Bishop Wilberforce quoted as the hardest one in the Bible to quote without smiling. — London Chronicle.

GREAT INTEREST IS BEING SHOWN

FATE OF THE COMMISSION LAW IN HANDS OF THE VOTERS.

THE VOTE IS FAIRLY HEAVY

Much Activity is shown by Those Opposed to the Adoption of the Law.

If the indications at three o'clock counted for anything, the vote of the city of Janeville on the adoption or rejection of the commission form of government will be much larger than was anticipated. The fine weather, good sleighing and warm winds has done much to get the vote out, as well as the diligent work of the riders and drivers for the two factions who are earning their pay in this unusual election time.

The vote at three o'clock was as follows:

First ward, 200 Fourth ward, 205
Second ward, 190 Fifth ward, 91
Third ward, 203

The campaign has been a most strenuous one and replete with surprises for both sides. Many of those who were at first most enthusiastic and signed the call for the special election are now open opponents of the plan, while others who were against or lukewarm in their support have developed into warm adherents.

Many of the names of persons said to be opposed to the law have stated during the day that they knew nothing of their names being used and some went so far as to state that they voted for the measure. Numerous tales, such as the commission, if chosen, would close all saloons and that the town would be dry, were sprung last night and today and brought out a fairly floating population who feared the permanent closing of their winter homes.

One of the noticeable features was the lack of knowledge of the law and its requirements despite the entombed publicity given and some who have been conducting by both sides of the question. In the fourth and fifth wards the vote is being gotten out as fast as possible by those opposed to the law and diligent work is being done in all the other three wards.

The returns from the different wards will be received at the Gazette office soon as it is taken off the machines and will be announced on a bulletin board in the office a few minutes after seven. Special arrangements have been made so that no delay will be experienced in obtaining these figures and they should be quickly made public.

One of the handicaps experienced by both those favoring and opposing the law is the lack of knowledge of how to vote on the question and it is safe to say that many votes were lost to both sides through errors of the voters in putting the lever. In most of the booths, however, the inspectors explained the system thoroughly to the voters.

The King's Daughters of the Baptist church will meet in the church parlor Thursday at 2 p.m.

A STRANGE PARALLEL.

The month of January sees the passing of Charles W. Morse to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for a term of 15 years; John R. Walsh in the midst of his trial, which may be decided adversely to him any day, and F. Augustus Heinz entering the trial (January 16), which may mean imprisonment for him. Thus are three bankers, who but a few years ago estimated their wealth in millions, today either behind the bar of justice or defending themselves against charges which may place them there.

The striking parallel of these three men who amassed millions through what has been called "high finance" affords an illustration of the decided change in the attitude not only of the courts, but of popular feeling toward such practices as these men employed.

All maintain their innocence and so far only one of the three has been finally determined guilty by the highest courts. The trial of F. Augustus Heinz, the Montana copper king who was indicted last October, comes up January 13 in the United States circuit court. Judge Hough will sit in the case. Heinz has pleaded not guilty and will fight the case with the best legal skill money can procure.

John R. Walsh is making a great fight along two lines. First, to pay up his indebtedness and second to gain his freedom. While the former may be straightened out to the satisfaction of the creditors, the question of Mr. Walsh's freedom hangs by a slender thread which may be broken at any moment, precipitating the great financier to a term of imprisonment. The final appeal for the convicted banker's liberty was filed with the supreme court in Washington this week. This was a brief in answer to the government's reply to the defendant's petition for a writ of certiorari. If after a consideration of this brief the supreme court still decides to issue a writ it is practically certain that Walsh will leave at once for the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., to serve his five years' sentence.

Optimist's Corner Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A.M.M.D.

The idea that excessive physical exercise is a sound means of promoting health is erroneous. Man is not constructed to be a running or leaping animal like a deer or a cat, and to raise the physical above the mental culture were to return to the shortness and misery of savage life. Physical training, while it should be moderately encouraged, should be refined and made secondary to mental training. Every rash and violent use of competitive powers should be disengaged.

Occupations of every kind, however varied they may be, require to be alternated, fairly, with rest and recreation. It is the worst mistake to suppose that most and best work can be done when these aids are omitted. Strictly, no occupation that calls forth special mental and physical work should fill more than one-third of the daily life. The minds of men of all classes ought now to be devoted to the promotion of a systematic method by which the productive labor of every life should be carried on within the limited term of eight hours in the 24. The body of man is not constructed to run its completed cycle under a heavier burden of labor.

30 YEARS OF SUCCESS

The Smith Drug Co. Offer a Remedy for Cataract. The Medicine Costs Nothing

If It Fails

When a medicine effects a successful treatment in a very large majority of cases, and when we offer that medicine on our own personal guarantee that it will cost the user nothing if it does not completely relieve cataract, it is only reasonable that people should believe us, or at least put our claim to a practical test when we take all the risk. These are facts which we want the people to substantiate. We want them to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, a medicine prepared from a prescription of a physician with whom cataract was a specialty, and who has a record of thirty years of enviable success to his credit.

We receive more good reports about Rexall Mucu-Tone than we do of all other cataract remedies sold in our store, and it more people only know what a thoroughly dependable remedy Rexall Mucu-Tone is, it would be the only cataract remedy we would have any demand for.

Rexall Mucu-Tone is quickly absorbed and by its therapeutic effect tends to disinfect and cleanse the entire mucous membranous tract, to destroy and remove the parasites which injure the membranous tissues, to soothe the irritation and heal the soreness, stop the mucous discharge, build up strong, healthy tissue and relieve the blood and system of diseased matter. Its influence is toward stimulating the mucocells, aiding digestion and improving nutrition until the whole body vibrates with healthy activity. In a comparatively short time it brings about a noticeable gain in weight, strength, good color and feeling of buoyancy.

We urge you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, beginning a treatment today. At any time you are not satisfied, simply come and tell us, and we will quickly return your money without question or quibble. We have Rexall Mucu-Tone in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Janesville only at our store,—The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

DID it ever occur to you that good work is a duty you owe to yourself far more than you owe it to your employer?

Did you ever realize that whenever you do a piece of slippish work you hurt yourself far more than the man you do it for?

For you do, you know.

If you are like most people, you have, probably, some day, when you were tired or a bit off form, said to yourself or more likely subconsciously thought to yourself—

"I guess I won't do my work quite as usual today. I do pretty good work generally, and I don't think it will make any difference if I occasionally do a little that isn't quite so good. I'll get by all right."

Yes, if you have any kind of a record to fall back upon, you probably will "get by."

But you'll suffer for it just the same.

For every time you do a piece of work and don't do it just as well as you possibly can, you weaken your ability to do it well the next time.

If the right word eludes me and, instead of insisting upon finding it before I go on with my work, I permit myself to be satisfied with a second-best word, I think I lose just so much of my ability to select the right word the next time.

And this is not true simply of athletic work, either, but of all work, humble or great.

Every time the girl behind the counter does not try her very best to impress upon the customer the desirability of the wares, and bring her to the buying point, I think that sales girl loses a little bit of her ability to deal with the next customer.

Every time anyone fails to deal with any problem that comes up to him in business, or dispatch any piece of work with all the skill he possesses, I thoroughly believe that he loses a certain degree of that skill—an infinitesimal small degree each time, I admit, but accumulating tremendously in the course of time.

Skill and ability of all kinds are like the muscles of our bodies. They grow by being used to their full extent. Please atrophy them. To keep them at their best, they must be constantly employed to their full value.

"We gain the strength of the temptation we resist," someone has said.

I think we do, and in the same way, I think, we gain the power of the temptation we overcome or the task we do to the best of our ability, and lose the power of the obstacle we give way before or the task we do only half as well as we could have done it.

TO WOMEN.

By MARY RUSSELL.

The amount of advice aimed at the hardest working body of American citizens would, if collected from the newspapers every day, make a large and interesting volume. It would be largely repetitious and perhaps all of it would flavor of the early Victorian era, but it would, nevertheless, make a book to move one to laughter and tears. It is the stuff written to women, of women and by women—and sometimes men—but it deserves the name of women, young and old, of mothers, of wives, of sweethearts, but especially that advice given to mothers—and working girls.

Lots of it is, in newspaper language, "good stuff," and lots of it is weak, and most of it is old, revamped and republished and held up as original.

How to cook, how to sew, how to bring up the children, how to behave in public, how to act in the home, how to treat servants, how to act if one is a servant, how to behave in every possible sphere, save and except one—and that is how to take the good of life and plan to have a little rest and time off in which to become acquainted with one's self.

Most women attempt too much. Every busily woman does, if she is a mother, and most of them do even if they are not.

Why does the average boarding house keeper desire men roomers instead of women? Because the woman is overhanging at her little niggling duties that she has been accustomed to consider womanly. Why is it that a woman and a man each earning the same amount will have such a disproportionately amount of leisure?

For one thing the girl has an idea she really does. The man, she says, buys a suit in the spring and another in the fall and he has all he needs. Now that is really not true. A man takes a great deal more dressing than that but he does it on a simpler scale than the girl.

Why will not the girl in the office or store take a lesson out of the young man's book and make two or three plain gowns do the work? Simple clothes are nearly always prettier and more refined in taste than the elaborate ones.

Buy fewer clothes—make as few of those as you can and put in the extra money and time having a good time. That does not mean wasting time on trifles, though. Little frivolity is a good thing once in a while. Learn to enjoy the big things of life. There are in every city open doors to much happiness if the girl goes after it with an honest purpose. Men do not as a rule make the best use of their time. They have fewer ideals than women, but they do know how to take the good, that comes their way, and keep young and happy longer than the average working girl.

Breeding skunks is rather a new industry in this state, but, nevertheless, it is a paying one with George Crooker of North Bath, and he has a colony of 20 polecats. The fur is used largely in the manufacture of coats and fur pieces, and Mr. Crooker is busy catching the animals for his yard. He has fenced in a 50-foot ledge with a high wire, and the little animals seem perfectly content with their new home.—Kennebec Journal.Don't Tell a Man a Secret.

IN A SNOW DRIFTEdward Norder, Thought to Have Been Lost Since First Part of December, Buried Yesterday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 11.—Funeral services were held this afternoon at two o'clock at the home of Jacob Norder, for his son, Edward Norder, who was found frozen in a snow bank under the Banta bridge, nearly two miles west of the city. It is generally believed that his body has been embalmed in the snow for four weeks, since the first snow came in December. Indications point to the fact that he was probably in the act of recovering his hat, blown off by the wind, and that he went down the steep embankment to recover it and could not get back to the top of the bridge. His body was frozen fast to the ground, and when found he was lying on his back with the overcoat collar pulled up under his face and with his arms folded.

The unfortunate young man is survived by his parents, four brothers and four sisters.

Appreciate Work.

That the efforts of the rural mail carriers, in getting over their routes this cold weather, is greatly appreciated by the farmers, is shown in the manner in which R. Matt Elmer, residing near the Junction House, treated the carrier on his route, K. C. Hubbard, carrier on Route 3, arrived at the Elmer farm six miles from the city at six o'clock in the evening, remaining there over night. When he started off next morning to finish his route, Mr. Elmer presented him with a sack of oats, fifteen pounds of fresh bread and ten pounds of honey. Mr. Hubbard finished his route at 1 o'clock that day.

Thomas Trumy,

Brief funeral services were held yesterday afternoon for Thomas Trumy, who ended his life Sunday morning at his home on East Mainline street, by blowing himself up with dynamite, and secretly planning the destruction of his wife and children at the same time. The case calls for deepest sympathy for the family and charity for the unfortunate mortal responsible for the deed.

Seeks Nomination.

Mack Olson, a former Monroe boy, and now of Des Moines, Iowa, is one of the leading candidates against Mayor A. J. Mathis in the primary race for mayor of Des Moines. He has many friends who are backing him and has been highly regarded as a candidate for some time, though he has not yet made a formal announcement.

Local Items.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Treat have passed their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary, are in splendid health and still retain much of the life and spirit of youth. Many friends called during the day and evening to extend congratulations and well wishes.

At the stockholder's meeting of the county fair yesterday, held at the court-house, it was found that a payment of $1,555.56 could be made on the debt, leaving a balance of $4,350 still due on the debt. State aid to the amount of $1,850 is due next month which will reduce the indebtedness to $2,500 for the next fair. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, R. B. Gifford; vice president, F. D. Jeffery; secretary, Leeland C. White; and treasurer, W. J. Knight. The directors are S. D. Fisher of Brodhead, Nicholas Heiml, Roy Juhberg, R. A. Eiter, and R. W. Church. The only office contested was that of secretary. Mr. White winning over Willard T. Sauer by a vote of 27 to 19.

Miss Rosa Druml had the misfortune to fall and sprain her ankle in front of Carroll's store, while returning home from her work Saturday evening. The injury is very painful and will keep her confined to the house for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Chudwick are contemplating a trip to Mexico City next month and will return home through Cuba and Florida.

H. W. Johnson, deputy grand regent of the state of Wisconsin, officiated at the installation of officers of Four Lakes Council No. 1533, Royal Arcanum, at Madison, last evening.

Dr. M. J. Newman has gone to Peterson, Ia., to see his brother, Mifflin O. Newman, who is very ill there with diabetes.

These figures give Wisconsin a higher rank than ever before among the states and nations engaged in the crusade against consumption," said Dr. H. E. Deerehoff, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Tuberculosis association. "The splendid support given by people of Wisconsin during this stamp campaign indicates a general awakening to a realization of fundamental truths about consumption. Now comes the desire to do something. Steps will be taken at once to work for definite attainable improvements."

It is impossible to express adequately an appreciation of the debt owed to the newspapers of Wisconsin for their invaluable assistance to the Christmas stamp campaign, and the anti-tuberculosis movement in general. We are deeply grateful to them.

Charles Kloebberger, who has been critically ill with appendicitis, has improved in the last few days and his physician thinks he is now in a fair way to recovery.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse of Wilkes Barre, Pa., writes: "I need to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion. While on a visit to my brother's I had a good chance to try Postum Food Coffee, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. In two weeks after using Postum I found I was much benefitted and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion."

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used."

"I observed a curious fact about Postum when used among brothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness."

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. They most always serve it before it has been boiled long enough. It should be boiled 15 to 20 minutes after boiling begins and served with cream, when it is certainly a delicious beverage. Read 'The Road to Wellville,' in page.

of His Horses.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Johnstown, Jan. 10.—Gus Schmalz met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon. He had returned from the city and allowed his team to go into the barn. After getting warm he went to the barn to remove the harness and was kicked in the face by one of the horses. He was unconscious for some time. Dr. Billie was called and found no bones broken, but one side of Mr. Schmalz's face is badly cut and bruised. He will be confined to his home for some days.

Alex. Hay, George Hull, John Morton and Bert Austin were in Chicago last week with carloads of hogs and sheep. Alex. Hay received the top price for hogs—$8.70 per hundred. George Hull received $8.00 per hundred.

Word has been received of the death of Wm. Anderson of Scotland, for many years a resident of this place.

Thomas Cullo is very ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas Lawless, near Janesville. Dr. Nuzum is attending her.

Mrs. E. Austin received the sad message Thursday of the death of her uncle, Mr. Frank Tratt of White-water.

Mrs. Rosa Merton received five prizes on her hula rocks at the poultry show last week.

Owing to the drifted condition of the roads last week two of our rural mail carriers found it impossible to make their trips. Much credit is due Percy Osler on Route 9. With the aid of his patrons he delivered mail every day.

WONDERFUL WORK IN
THE SALE OF STAMPSBlack River Falls Leaps Into the Limelight by Its Work.

Black-River Falls, Wis., has suddenly leaped into international fame in anti-tuberculosis work by its remarkable showing in the Christmas stamp campaign conducted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association.

This little city of 1,917 population (1905) sold 98,000 Christmas stamps at one cent each, or 50.57-100 stamps for each inhabitant, winning the $1,000 Aero vacuum cleaning system offered by the association to the city of less than 2,000 population selling the most stamps per capita.

This is undoubtedly the best showing made by any city in the world that engaged in the sale of Christmas stamps.

Burlington, Racine county, won the prize for cities of 2,000 and over, also a $1,000 Aero vacuum cleaning system, by disposing of 56,450 stamps, or 22.35-100 per inhabitant. The population is 2,625. This is itself a remarkable record, which would command national attention were not Black River Falls' record so overwhelmingly good.

Another wonderful record was established by the first ward school in Milwaukee, which won another $1,000 Aero vacuum cleaning system for each inhabitant, winning the $1,000 Aero vacuum cleaning system offered by the association to the city of less than 2,000 population selling the most stamps per capita.

The Island of Regeneration

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

"No," said the woman, "I respect you too much for that."

"Respect me!"

"Yes, You have shown me what you are by what you have done, all but this mad action of a moment since, and I can understand that, my friend, for I too love, and it seems to me that I would brook anything, even everything, for one moment like that you just would have enjoyed. But we are not children, neither are we savages in act like beasts of prey. I forgive you, I trust you." She came close to him and laid her hand upon his arm. "I respect you, I admire you!"

"Everything," said the man, "but love me."

"Everything but that," assented the woman quintly.

"I shan't offend again," returned the man. "Neither by force nor persuasion can I affect anything, Kate," he said after another pause, "come back to the United States or to some civilized land. The world is before you. I will land you where you please and give you or lend you money enough to enable you to get where you like. You shall be on the yacht to me as my master!"

"It can't be," said the woman. "Don't you see that I can accept no favors from you?"

"But no one need ever know; I will discharge the crew of the yacht in some South American port. They will scatter."

"God would know and I would know and when I see him again, I would have to tell him. It would make it harder for me. And I don't want to go back. I will wait here for him."

"Kate," said the man impulsively, "it was ungenerous of me not to have told you before. They took him away from the Islands sensuous, raving with brain fever. He collapsed stricken as if dead on the sand by that little heap of clothes and the Bible which bore your monogram. He thought you dead. He left the ship in the early morning to seek you. The shock was too much for him."

"He loved me, then," said the woman.

"Yes," said Langford, wringing the admission from his lips, "he loved you enough almost to die for you."

"But he is not dead. He was not when you left the cruiser!"

"No, they signaled me at noontime in answer to my inquiry that the doctor, thought, he would finally pull through, although it would be a long, terrible siege; but if he dies, Kate, if I got back and found that he is dead and come here—"

"Don't come back," said the woman.

"Don't tell anyone that I am here. Let no one ever come back unless the promptings of his heart and the leading of God should bring him to me."

"In this your final, absolute decision?"

"My final and absolute decision. Nothing can alter it, nothing, absolutely nothing."

"O Kate!"

"Don't," said the woman. "It is useless and only breaks your heart and wrings mine. Now, you must go. No one has seen you from the yacht. This care is sheltered from where she lies. No one need know that you have found me. Indeed I want you to give me your word of honor, to swear it by all that you hold sacred that you will never tell anyone, much less him, that you came back and found me alive."

"You set me hard task," faltered the man.

"But I am sure," continued the woman, "it is not too hard for you to accomplish. Come, you have said you wanted to make amends. That is all past now, forgotten and forgiven, but tander when they took him into the great drawing-room and showed him the pictures of his father and of his mother. He was the living image of the man, tempered with some of the mother's sweetness. This remarkable likeness—indeed he was not unlike his uncle as well—coupled with the material proofs, the ring, the Bible, the evidence of the ship, together with what was known, removed every lingering doubt from the minds of those most concerned.

The family was reduced to those two, the uncle and the nephew. The old man formally and legally recognized the relationship and offered to transfer the property rightfully his, which since the discovery of coal had increased enormously in value, to the newcomer, but Charnock would have none of it then. He recognized his infirmities to deal with such things, if the older man would retain it, he could give it to him at his death. Meanwhile he could teach and train him how to use it. Bereft of his one guide, the one inspiration in life, he would need who counsel and careful leading indeed.

In addition to the formal recognition, the older man legally adopted the younger and constituted him the heir to his own property which was almost as extensive and as valuable as that which rightly belonged to the nephew. And then those formalities being completed, the Lieutenant-commander and the chaplain summoned elsewhere by their duties, bade the two farewell and left them.

Charnock could not have fallen into better hands. Education was his first requirement and he applied himself to it with a fierce energy and a grim determination which presently, from the splendid foundation which had been laid enabled him to progress sufficiently to take his place and hold his own with men and women. It was impossible to keep secret forever the details of such a story as his, especially when it was linked with a name so famous and still remembered as that of Katharine Brenton, and it had been decided by Capt. Ashby and Whitaker and the man himself that such portions of it as would suffice to explain his own presence and her fate should be given to the world. Upon the foundation thus afforded romance budded. Charnock immediately became a marked man. He would have been a marked man in any event from the financial power that he possessed.

"I would stay gladly," returned the man, "but I thought that I were welcome, but I know that cannot be."

"I will wait," said the woman. "Good-bye!"

She extended her hand to him. He seized it in his own trembling grasp and kissed it. He remained a moment with his lips pressed to her hand and she laid her other hand upon his bended head. He heard her lips murmur words of prayer. He released her hand, stooped lower, laid something at her feet, turned and resolutely marched out into the sunlight.

The woman lifted her hand, the hand he had kissed. It was wet with tears. The man had left her with a breaking heart. She sat down upon the sand to think her thoughts during her two hours wait. Her bare foot touched something metallic. She bent over and picked it up. It was her watch. He had placed it there. The simple kindness, the spontaneous generosity of the little action moved her as had not all his pleas, and she mingled her own tears with his upon her hand.

She looked at the watch after a while and found that more than two hours had elapsed, nearly three. The latter part of the time had fled swiftly in thoughts of him. She was hungry and thirsty, too. It was noon. She went out on the sands. The yacht was nowhere to be seen. She could not have gotten below the horizon. She divined that he had sailed around the island and away in that direction.

There was a pile of boxes and things on the sand above the high water mark. She stepped toward it and opened one of the sea chests. It was filled with books and papers, a strange collection. He had ransacked the yacht for her. Another chest contained provisions with which he had long been unfamiliar. There were tolerable articles, pieces of cloth, writing paper, pencils, a heapful profusion of all that he fancied she might need, that might afford solace and companionship to her and alleviate the loneliness of those hours. In her heart she thanked him, and lifting up her hands, she blessed him again. He had made life possible and tolerable to her. She could write, she could read, she could sew. And all this while she could hope and dream.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Great Purpose.

Late springtime in old Virginia. The climate was not unlike that of the land during the cooler portions of the year, thought the man, standing on the porch of the high-pillared old brick house set upon a hill overlooking the pale green waters of Hampton Roads, which stretched far eastward past Newport News and Old Point Comfort to the blue of the Chesapeake and far beyond that to the deeper blue of the ocean. Back of him a thousand leagues of land and more than a thousand leagues of sea intervened between him and the object of his thoughts. Not for a day, not for an hour, scarcely for a moment even was he out of his mind. There was pleasure and pain in the recollection of it.

"You set me hard task," faltered the man.

"But I am sure," continued the woman, "it is not too hard for you to accomplish. Come, you have said you wanted to make amends. That is all past now, forgotten and forgiven, but nothing, absolutely nothing."

"Don't," said the woman. "It is useless and only breaks your heart and wrings mine. Now, you must go. No one has seen you from the yacht. This care is sheltered from where she lies. No one need know that you have found me. Indeed I want you to give me your word of honor, to swear it by all that you hold sacred that you will never tell anyone, much less him, that you came back and found me alive."

No one need know that you have found me. Indeed I want you to give me your word of honor, to swear it by all that you hold sacred that you will never tell anyone, much less him, that you came back and found me alive."
